Consultants can deliver a gap analysis of issues and or problem areas.

However, they often don't provide tangible solutions that organisations can own and develop themselves.

DIViN will work with you to identify and work through issues, and to develop tangible and practical solutions that you can take ownership of and easily implement within your organisation.

We can develop a detailed action plan and provide an-easy-to-use online project management tool that delivers a tangible solution for staff members to communicate with each other, and to manage and complete their actions.

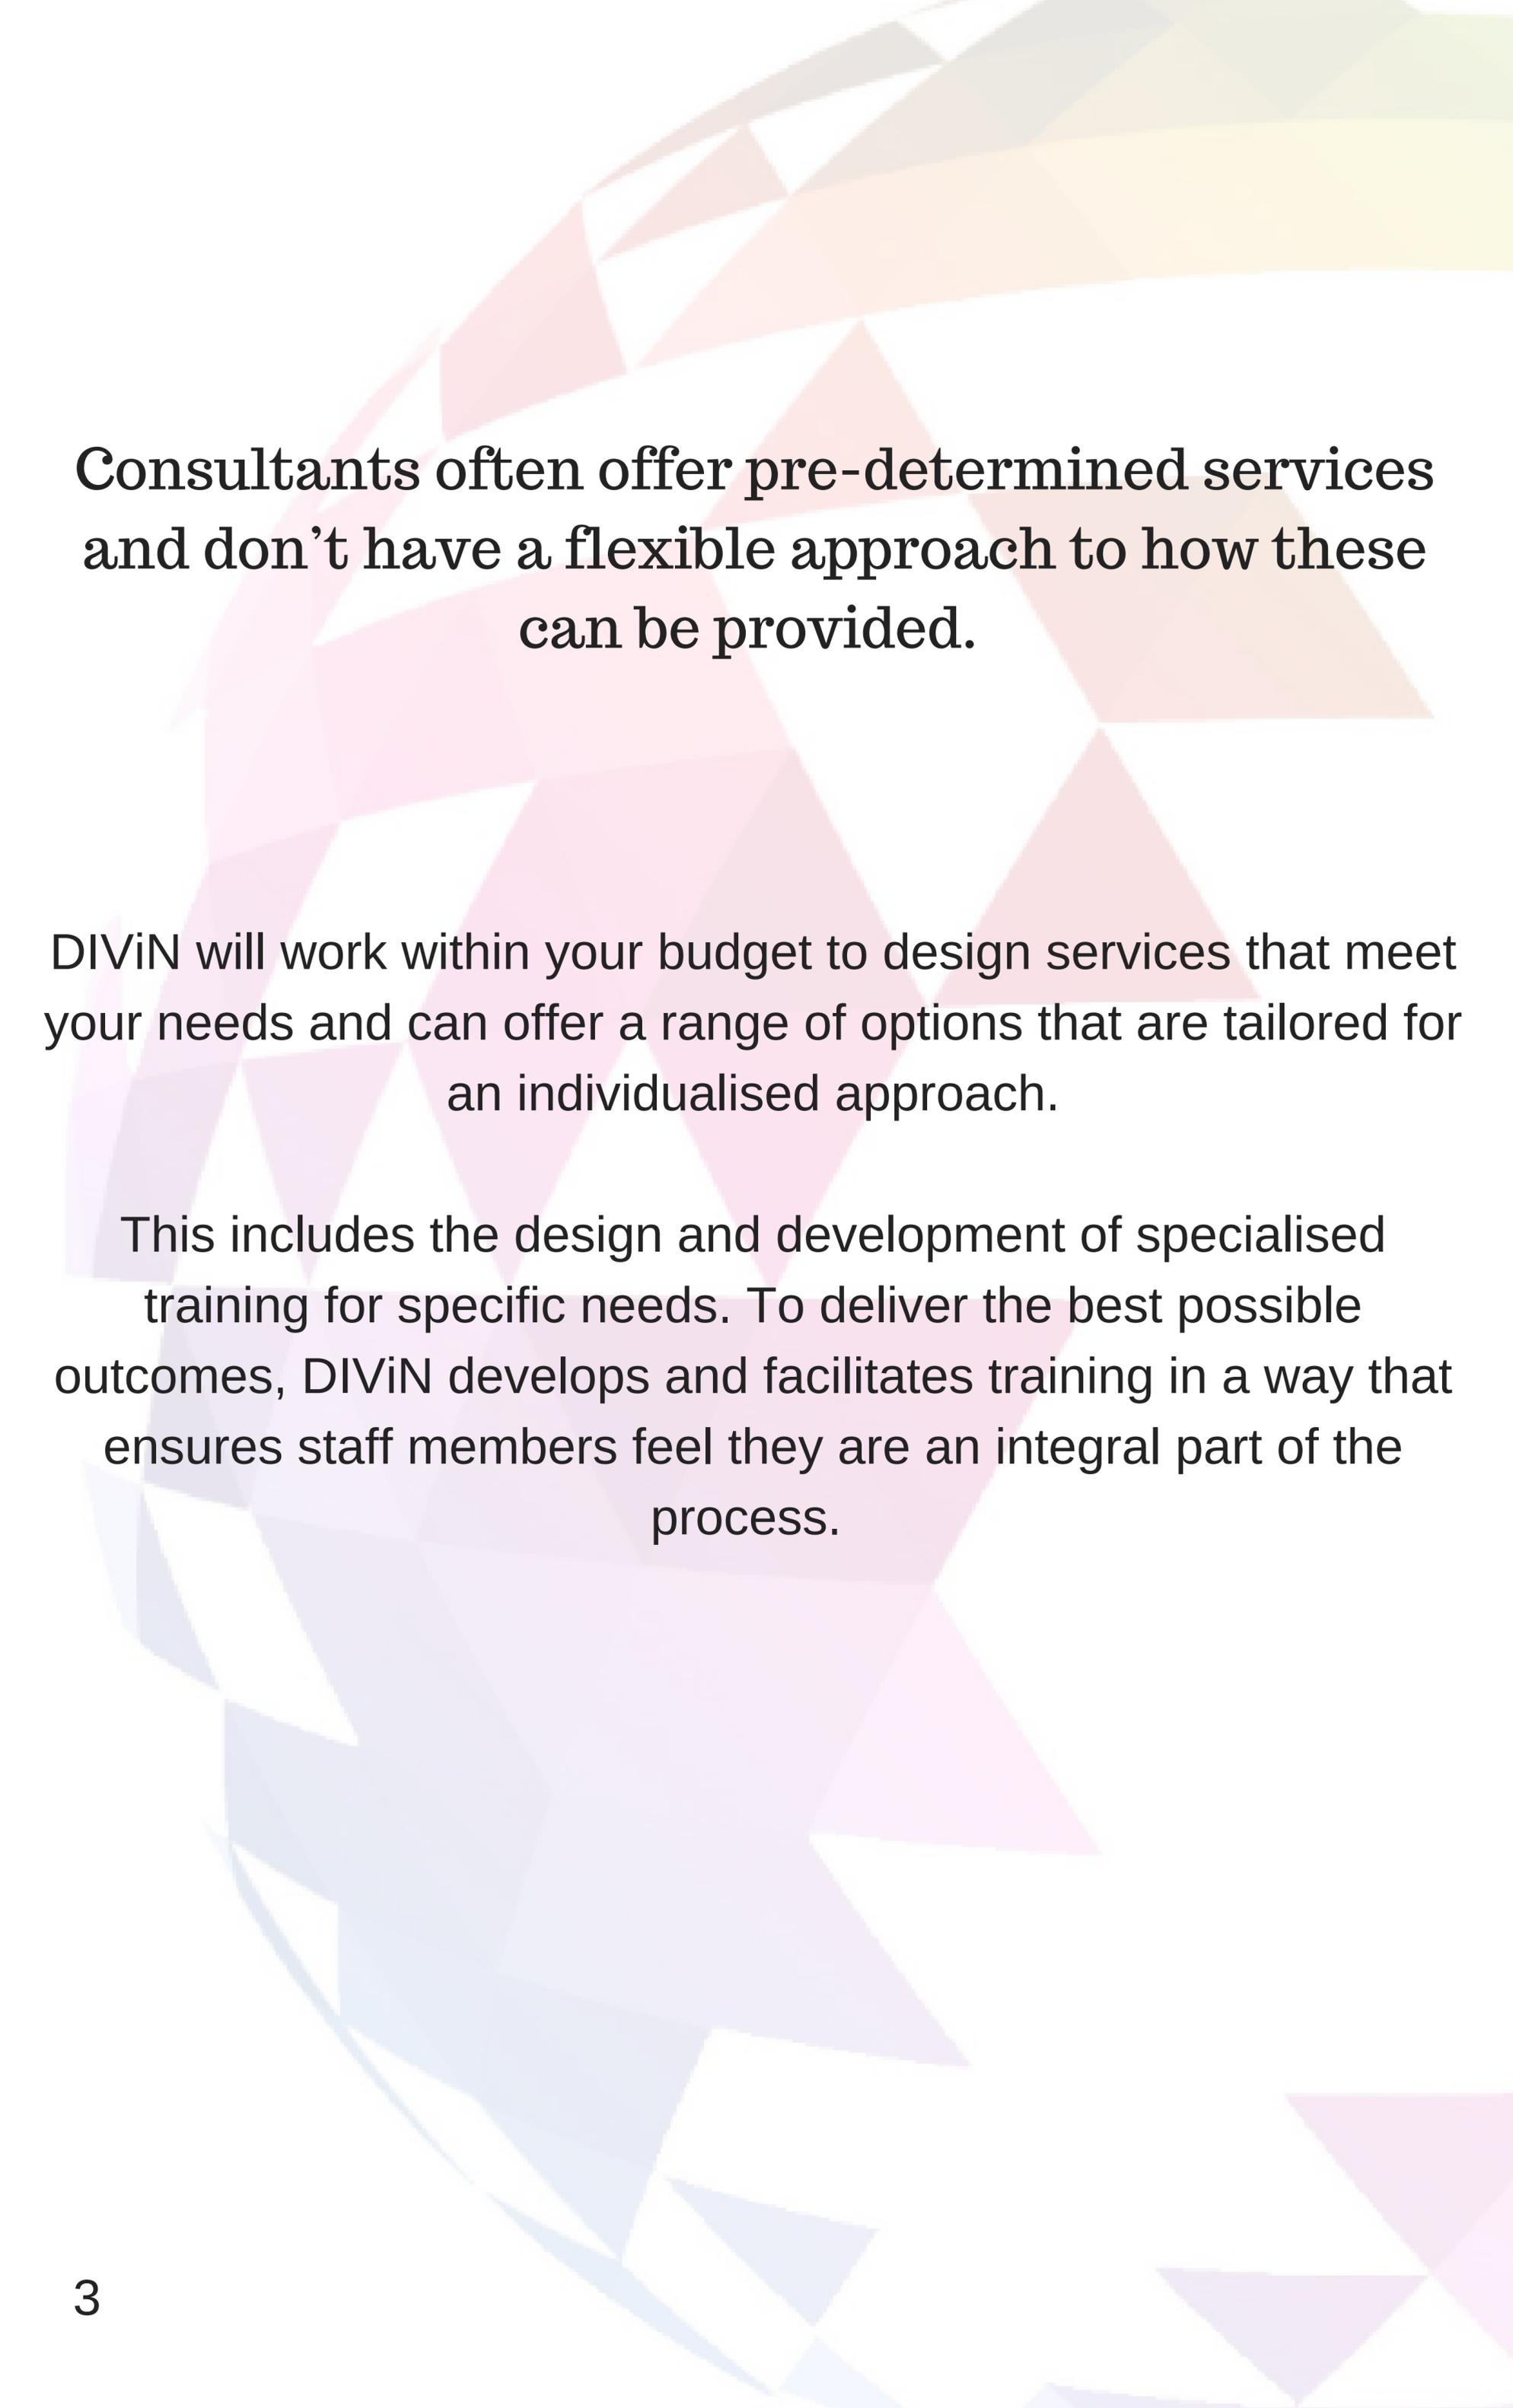

Consultants say they “know your business” but often don’t have a working knowledge of the sector or the impact of transitioning to the NDIS environment.

DIViN has experience working in the human services sector and by working with a broad range of clients, has accumulated an in-depth knowledge of how the NDIS operates.

We can translate this understanding into how it relates to your organisation, and provide an in-depth understanding of how a Participant experiences the NDIS Pathway, enabling you to leverage this knowledge to prepare your clients for transition into the NDIS.

Consultants often offer pre-determined services and don't have a flexible approach to how these can be provided.

DIViN will work within your budget to design services that meet your needs and can offer a range of options that are tailored for an individualised approach.

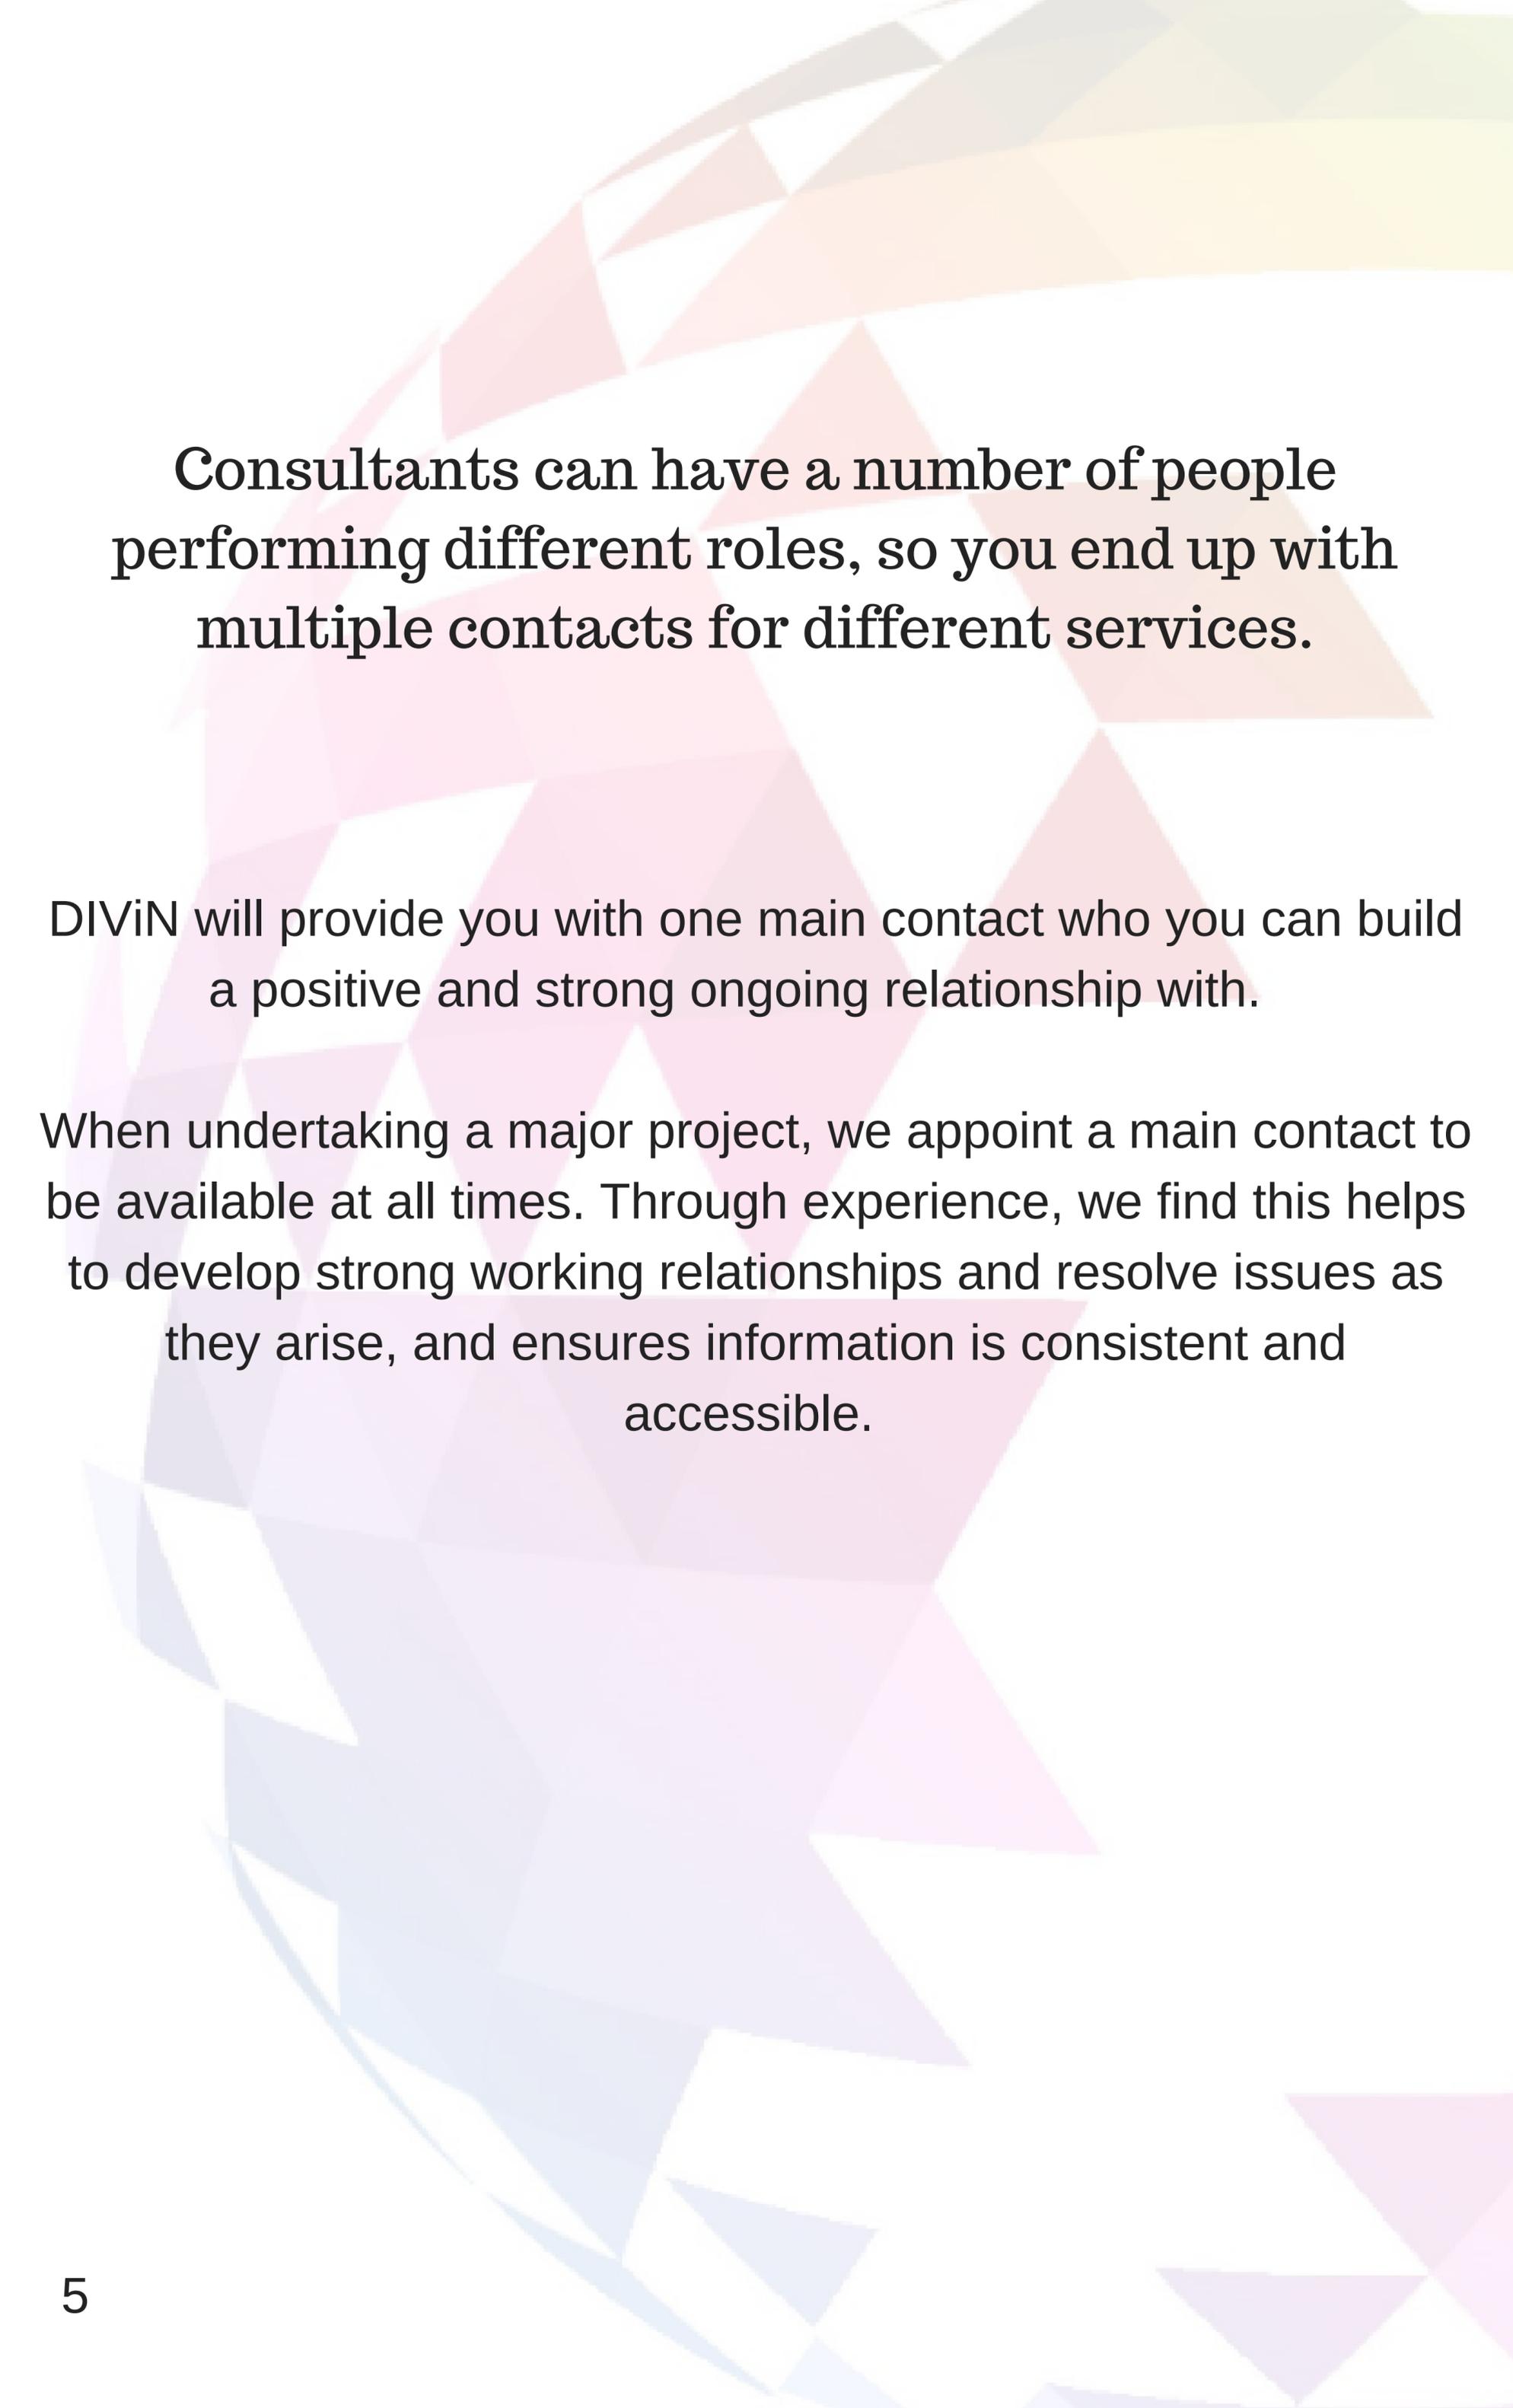

This includes the design and development of specialised training for specific needs. To deliver the best possible outcomes, DIViN develops and facilitates training in a way that ensures staff members feel they are an integral part of the process.

Consultants often focus on a certain aspect of a project and don't provide services that span across the life of a project.

DIViN is able to offer services across the breadth of a project including analysis, design, development, implementation, monitoring, evaluation and review.

We provide project management, relationship building, workshop management and instructional designs for the projects we undertake, starting from the outset of the project through to the final evaluation and review.

Consultants can have a number of people performing different roles, so you end up with multiple contacts for different services.

DIViN will provide you with one main contact who you can build a positive and strong ongoing relationship with.

When undertaking a major project, we appoint a main contact to be available at all times. Through experience, we find this helps to develop strong working relationships and resolve issues as they arise, and ensures information is consistent and accessible.

What's the next step?

At DIViN, our services are tailored to our clients' needs and designed to help all organisations design, develop and take ownership of practical, easily implementable and tangible solutions.

Contact us today to speak with an NDIS experienced consultant about your organisation's needs!
